With help from Pitney Bowes and PlanetPress Suite, UCR Santé is optimizing its production and mailing processes and significantly reducing its postage costs.

UCR, a personal insurance brokerage firm that has been in business for over 20 years now, sells and manages complementary health coverage and insurance products for over 60,000 members. Managing contracts, benefits, certificates from third-party payers, premiums and other documents involves a considerable volume of client communications. As such, the processing, production and mailing of these communications entails enormous printing and postage costs.

David Lefebvre, head of UCR's IT department

Further to a management integration policy, UCR did a comparative cost-benefit analysis between the outsourcing and the internal management of client mailings. One of UCR's requirements was the ability to quickly add to its regular mailings, as needed, promotional inserts or other documents, an option that is not available from outsourcing services.

UCR therefore decided to reinternalize the formatting and mailing of documents such as reimbursement statements and direct-payment cards, thereby adding another 20,000 mailings to the 5,000 monthly mailings already being processed internally. This increase in volume prompted the company to review its mailing methods and update its equipment, which included the DI380 and DM500 inserting systems, which were better suited to lower volumes. UCR asked Pitney Bowes to find a solution to help it manage the heavier workload.

Representatives at Pitney Bowes not only helped UCR to optimize its inserting process with equipment designed to process high volumes, but also proposed PlanetPress Suite as an integrated solution for automatically sorting and collating client mailings, thereby reducing print volumes. This solution also enabled the company to reformat address blocks to meet French standards and thereby significantly reduce its postage costs. According to David Lefebvre, the head of UCR's IT department, «in eight months, the company has saved over €10,000 in postage costs alone!»

Thanks to PlanetPress Suite, UCR can now insert several types of mailings to the same client into a single envelope. Before the documents are sent for printing, PlanetPress Suite groups the various documents by member number, reformats the address according to Courrier Industriel standards, selects the appropriate appendices, applies a barcode, and sorts the batches by department or even postal code. The documents are then printed on letterhead and inserted into an envelope; postage of €0.41 — instead of the previous €0.46 — is then applied. By grouping mailings, UCR has also improved its corporate image; instead of three different mailings in a single month, clients now receive just one.

Also thanks to PlanetPress Suite, the company is now looking at the possibility of grouping other types of documents together with the monthly reimbursement statements, as well as communicating with clients by email rather than regular mail, which would further optimize its client relations.
